Pirates Ahoy!

A message is found on the beach where a female castaway is to be rescued. Pupils should find out where she has been abandoned and they will make a virtual journey through different ports until they reach the coasts of Spain and England. They will discover the cultural and geographical heritage of diverse cultures related to piracy, proposing strategies by working values such as gender equality, diversity, and respect. As a final product, a collaborative "Treasure Hunt" portfolio will be drawn up with all their discoveries. Along their journey, they will improve their English and Spanish among other languages.

AIMS
- To discover historical characters related to navigation and piracy, celebrating the role of women in history.
- To situate and learn about coastal places of remarkable geographical and historical importance.
- To enhance the use of ICT to introduce each other and virtually meet their peers, learn about their hometowns and share information about their findings.
- To work on values such as gender equality, diversity, and respect through geographical and historical knowledge.
- To improve and raise the standards in MFL and to learn about each other's cultural heritage through paintings, music, sports, and traditional games and clothes.
- To use a Project-Based Learning methodology and the European Language Portfolio for the development and evaluation of this journey across history.
